Chapter 1 by Josiah Somani

The starship, U.S.S Enterprise, NCC-1701-D, was stuck on the outer rim of a spacial anomaly, only known as superstring hole.

"Captain, I don't think I can get us out of here," Lieutenant Commander and Chief Engineer Geordi LaForge announced through the intercom.

"Noted, Mister LaForge." Captain Jean-Luc Picard responded.

As the ship kept struggling it's way out of the anomaly, the starship's sensors detected a roughly spherical object coming straight out of the anomaly. The object seemed to only be made out of wood.

"Data, what is that?" The Captain asked.

"Sir, an object is coming out of the anomaly at almost sub-light speed. It is roughly spherical, but seems to have a sort-of temporal engine that most likely caused this superstring." Data, the Chief Operations Officer and a Soong Type Android reported.

With it's presence, the superstring anomaly collapsed in on itself, causing a shockwave to send the unknown object and the starship flying through space.

"Clara, it's that lever over there!" The Doctor announced.

Clara, the companion of the time traveling time lord named The Doctor was traveling through time and space in The Doctor's ship named: "Time and Relative Dimensions in Space", or T.A.R.D.I.S, and The Doctor was teaching her how to fly. But now they had run into a problem.

No, that's 2365, and you used the super-string engines. Just, just Clara, stop.

Then the monitor on the T.A.R.D.I.S.

"Sensors detect a Galaxy Class starship. Shut down all main engines to avoid timeline destruction"

The Doctor panicked. He pulled several levers and kept on moving around the console. Finally with his trusty mallet, the superstring systems turned offline and all motion stopped.

"Oh, thank gosh." The Doctor sighed.

"Okay," Clara trailed. "We probably need to contact that big ship over there."

"I don't know, Clara, we might be interfering with the timeline." The Doctor noted.

"Well, Doctor, the thing is that if we contact the ship, our timeline will be the timeline of the timeline that we are in - if that makes sense." Clara responded.

"I don't get it. Anyway, let me see if I can get a view on that starship, named "NCC-1701-D, U.S.S. Enterprise-D"

On the T.A.R.D.I.S monitor there was a large ship with two large engines in the back called warp nacelles, and in the front was a grey saucer section, and below that was the neck of the ship, and then the nacelles. The ship also seemed to have the capability to detach from the saucer section and drive section.

"Okay, we'll go down, but we're going stealthily. I like stealth. Stealth is cool. Like bow-ties." The Doctor said flapping about.

"Was that really necessary?" Clara announced while rolling her eyes.

The Doctor responded with a stop of hands, and getting back to business.

"Right! Setting course right inside the Enterprise!"

"Captain, something is materializing inside Cargo Bay 3. It seems to be the same object.

Scanners indicate text on it, 'Police Public Call Box.' These devices are from the early 20th century. They were used to--" Data said, suddenly interrupted by the Captain.

"Thank you, Mister Data, but I don't need a lecture right now. Now," The captain said while standing up on the fancy bridge of the starship. "Mister Worf?"

Lieutenant Worf, standing up at a long arc above the bridge chairs with a control panel, the chief tactical officer on the U.S.S Enterprise, who was the only non-human on board, responded:

"Yes, sir?"

"Get a security team to Cargo Bay 3."

"Aye, sir!"

The T.A.R.D.I.S re-materialized in Cargo Bay 3, sadly not very stealthily. A security team was waiting right outside the large and dull cargo bay.

"Clara, let me go out first." The Doctor whispered. The Doctor creaked open the door. Two guards saw him and pointed their large phaser rifles, right at the door. The Doctor slammed the door behind him.

"Okay. That wasn't stealthy."

"Captain," Mr. Worf began, "I am getting strange readings from the object. It is far more advance than us."

"Any signs of weapons or hostility Lieutenant?" Jean-Luc asked.

"Not yet, Captain."

Jean-Luc nods slowly. "Number one, please make preparations for saucer separation. Mr. Worf take us to red alert."

"Aye, Captain." Riker and Worf responded. Jean-Luc straightens his uniform and then knots his brow. "Mr. Worf, report all actions to me. Mr. Crusher, Mr. Data, Mr. Worf, please report to the battle bridge." The men leave their respective posts and walk off the bridge, replacements taking their spots.

*

"Doctor!" Clara begins, "How did we end up here?" She asks following the pacing doctor around the instrument panel.

"You know me, Clara! I never know why these things happen! It's called an adventure." he says with emphasis.

"Well what are we going to do?"

The Doctor walks out to the door and pauses with his hand on the door. "I am going to go meet our hosts!" He says and flings open the door and disappears through the other side.

"Let's hope our guests are hospitable." He says as the lift doors open momentarily, he steps off and walks down the hallway, Riker trailing him closely. He pauses briefly at the Cargo Bay entrance, Riker steps up to his flank and they enter together with a fluid motion.

"Ah! Finally, Captain. It is good to finally meet you." The doctor steps forward with his hand extended. The security team brandish their phasers. The Doctor cautiously steps back raising his hands a little. "There is no need for guns, gentlemen. I am just a traveler."

Jean-Luc smiles. "We have had Travelers aboard before and we ended up several thousand lightyears away." He chuckles lightly. "Welcome aboard the star ship Enterprise." He says with a proud smile.

"Yes, yes.. I know. Tell me where are we?"

"We are in sector 1, 4, 6."

"Ok... when are we?"

Jean-Luc furrows his brow. "The stardate is 2378.3, why?"

"Ah--" The ship shudders violently, the gathering all stumble. When they recover Jean-Luc taps his communicator.

"Mr. Worf, what the hell happened?"

"Three Romulan war-birds have entered the system." Jean-Luc looks to the doctor with a knotted brow....

The captain taps his communicator. "Mr. Worf, your status?" Worf acknowledges and responds:

"Sir, the saucer is ready to separate. All families have been moved to the saucer section and the drive section is ready to battle."

Picard responds, "Very well. Continue with the separation." He taps his communicator again. Picard follows Riker. "So, your name is?" Picard asks the Doctor. "The Doctor is the name! Just... The Doctor." He responds.

"Oh, don't forget me, I'm Clara." Clara budges in.

"Hmm. Very well. Now then Doctor, I must return to the bridge. Commander, take this doctor and her companion of ours somewhere safe. He might be able to explain the superstring anomaly."

The commander stops dead in his tracks and turns around and walks towards nearby empty quarters. As the commander is opening the door, the Doctor puts his hands on his shoulder.

"Commander," The Doctor pauses. "Do you think we could maybe go back to our box?"

"I'm afraid not, Doctor." The commander responds in a commanding voice. "You're going to have to stay here for the time being, even if your box is safer than our ship, we still don't know if you're a threat or not. Please cooperate with us Doctor."

The Doctor sighs and moves into the quarters.

*

The ship shudders again. The warbirds start moving into an attack formation.

"Mr. Worf, standby phaser banks, load torpedo bays." The captain orders.

"Phaser banks..." Worf pauses. "Are not responding, sir!" He continues.

The captain taps a few buttons on his chair, and a communications channel is open to the engineering deck.

"Geordi, we need phasers, now!" The captain announces.

The ship shudders once more.

"Shields are at 90 percent, captain." Worf announces.

"The warbirds have moved into an attack formation, sir." Commander Data completes.

The captain sighs and attempts to fire torpedos. A similar failure to the phasers occurs in the torpedo bays.

"Suggestions?" The captain announces to the bridge crew.

"Captain, we can go to warp." Data announces.

In an instant after that, Geordi reports that the warp engines, main power, impulse engines, weapons and shields have gone off-line.

The romulans attack continues, and the hull is breached on multiple decks of the drive section.

The saucer remains unchanged. No more suggestions are added.

"Doctor, what's going on! And what are those huge green bird looking things out there!" Clara said with a shriek.

"Well - uhm, well.." The Doctor paused with his hands nervously moving about. "Those two green things are big..." The Doctor paused again, thinking of a word. "Battleships, yes battleships. And we're absolutely defenseless, and I'm pretty sure this isn't supposed to be happening!" He shouted.

Clara panicked and started moving about the room. Then she stopped dead.

"Doctor, we need to get to the T.A.R.D.I.S. It was on, um --" Clara was interrupted by another violent palpitation. "Deck 12!" She finished.

The Doctor and Clara immediately left their quarters and ran down the corridor, hitting walls and emergency force fields on the way. Once they reached the turbolift, they specified Deck 12 and the lift began to move. On their way, an aggressive shake, destroying a warp nacelle and aggressively shaking the ship causes the lift to fall over 20 decks down, and down.
